

Mission Statement

The mission of the International Journal of Therapeutic Jurisprudence is to publish practical editions that engage and influence the legal and scientific communities. This journal seeks to supplement traditional law review articles with work from all fields. The International Journal of Therapeutic Jurisprudence seeks to become the prominent source of all issues of Therapeutic Jurisprudence. The International Journal of Therapeutic Jurisprudence is also committed to upholding the Mission Pillars adopted by Arizona Summit Law Review.

Arizona Summit Law Review

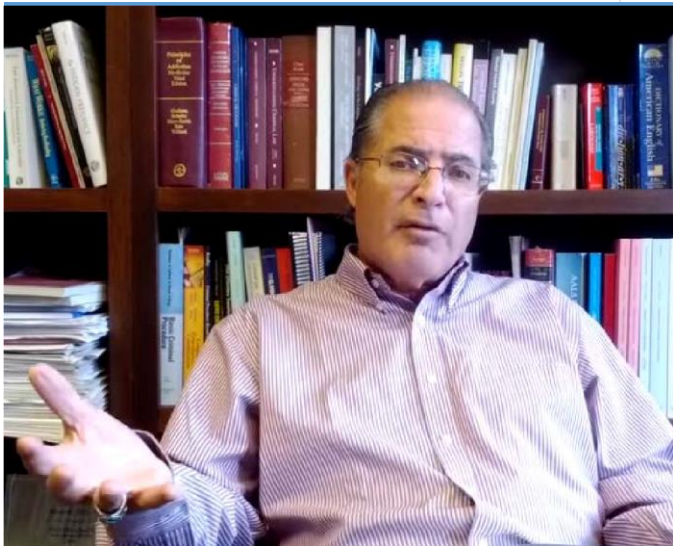

One North Central Ave
Phoenix, AZ 85004

www.arizonasummitlawreview.org

Would like to present:

International Journal of Therapeutic Jurisprudence

"I was asked to write within the general area of law and therapy, and decided to sharpen my focus by concentrating not on law and therapy but rather on law as therapy, as therapy through law, thereby offering a conceptual framework for therapeutic jurisprudence as a discrete field of inquiry.

Professor David Wexler,
Co Founder of Therapeutic Jurisprudence

New Journal

Starting in the summer of 2015, Arizona Summit Law Review will begin publishing a brand new journal focusing on Therapeutic Jurisprudence.

Not Just a Legal Journal

The International Journal of Therapeutic Jurisprudence will include articles of both legal and scientific importance. We would like to include as much useful and relevant info to our readers as possible, including accepting articles not normally included in a law review journal.

To accompany a wide variety of submissions, we have also created a process to have scientific articles peer reviewed to be accredited in their given field.

The International Journal of Therapeutic Jurisprudence will begin accepting articles immediately and will be produced by spring 2016.

Our History

Arizona Summit Law Review has been a leading journal in therapeutic jurisprudence. We have produced five issues solely devoted to the topic of therapeutic jurisprudence. With the help of Professor David Wexler, we hope to continue our collection of TJ articles with the creation of this new journal.

Contact Us

If you have any questions about the journal or about the submission process please feel free to contact our faculty advisors Professor David Wexler and Professor Michael Jones or one of our executive board Members Matthew Meehan or William Cawthon; their contact info is provided below.

Professor David Wexler

University of Puerto Rico
Emeritus Professor, University of Arizona Law School
davidBwexler@yahoo.com
(787) 656-1625

Professor Michael Jones

Arizona Summit Law School
mjones@azsummitlaw.edu

Matthew Meehan

Editor-in-Chief – Arizona Summit Law Review
mbmeehan@student.azsummitlaw.edu
(602) 309-9517

William Cawthon

Executive Managing Editor – International Journal of Therapeutic Jurisprudence
wmcawthon@student.azsummitlaw.edu
(602) 918-3241

Submissions

If you have an article that you would like to submit to the International Journal of Therapeutic Jurisprudence please submit via email. Our Executive Board will review your submission and contact you with further information.

Submissions Email:
wmcawthon@student.azsummitlaw.edu